Farm Animals

Farm Animals

Hello There!
Old MacDonald is a great opportunity for kids to learn about animals on the farm.
While working that vocabulary you can also practice:

· patterns
· Sizes
· Animals and their babies
· The sound animals make
· Colors
· Numbers

We suggest you use two videos to work the vocabulary and also add music and body movement to them. It is known that kids learn better when they learn through their bodies—we call this TPR (total physical response).

Also, keep in mind that we must offer different activities that will stimulate different multiple intelligences.
We are different, therefore we learn in various ways. It is our responsibility as teachers, to offer students activities that will contemplate all their learning abilities.

Video 2—The Animals in the Farm

If you want to play online go to the Farm Animals Jamboard, open it and create a copy for you so you can play as many times as you wish.

Print the activities and have fun with the kids.

Print the Puzzles, and cut on the black lines and glue on card stock. If possible laminate with contact paper or a laminator.

Have the children match them and say the name of the animal and its baby.

You can also play a memory game by turning the cards down.

Cut on the black lines separating the halves of each animal. Spread them on the table and have the children match the matching half.

Next, have the children make a new animal matching a different half. They should create a new name for the new animal.
